

On the cover

How to manage the growing rivalry between America and a rising China: leader, page 9. Trade has long anchored their relations, but it is no longer enough. The world should be worried. See our special report, after page 42. The trade war's latest blows, page 62

• Farage: Brexit's pinstriped populist He is once again at the heart of British politics: Bagehot, page 49. In an unwanted election, both of Britain's main parties look like taking a drubbing, page 47. In the rest of Europe, the vote looks oddly consequential: briefing, page 16

• Comedy and politics, joined at the quip Legislators are the unacknowledged comics of the world: leader, page 12. The populists' secret weapon, page 50
