

On the cover

America's future will be written in two mega-states: leader, page 7. California and Texas have radically different approaches. Which works better? See our special report after page 38

• Which Boris will Britain get? Britain's probable next prime minister cannot resist playing to the crowd. In today's ugly politics that is ominous: leader, page 8. A worrying number of MPs are backing him mainly because someone else is, page 44. European views of him range from mistrustful to contemptuous, page 45. The best case against him was made by Plato: Bagehot, page 46

• The dire Strait of Hormuz Backed into a corner, Iran is lashing out, page 35

• Reigning cats and dogs It is not clear that the global boom in pet-keeping is doing humans much good, page 47. Who owns whom? Leader, page 10
