

On the cover

Europe is "on the edge of a precipice", says France's president. Is he right? Leader, page 9. In a blunt interview, Emmanuel Macron spoke to The Economist about Europe's fragile place in a hostile world: briefing, page 18. A government led by Jeremy Corbyn would present a radical challenge to Britain's global alliances: Bagehot, page 51

• In defence of billionaires
Large personal fortunes are an unreliable guide to where government policy has gone wrong: leader, page 10. Have billionaires accumulated their wealth illegitimately? Page 67

• Cameroon's forgotten war
A bastion of stability in central Africa could fall apart if outsiders do not help: leader, page 10. A report from a conflict that has driven 500,000 from their homes, page 41

• A hard-headed guide to diversity How to make your firm more inclusive, page 55

• Our poll of Britain's swing seats The first in our five-part series of constituency polls finds the Conservatives struggling to win in a crucial Midlands marginal, page 49
